Reflections on a Lifetime

This do I know or remember all of these details? Simply because I heard them repeated so many, many times during my young life, and of course, I was present until the other was given to me. After during that period some sixty years ago orthopedic surgery was not what it has become today. The general anesthetic supplies were not feasible for this sort of an emergency, and I would like to believe that this choice did the very best job under difficult circumstances. Thirty years later when I first came to the University of Iowa, I was told by a hand specialist at the University Hospital that surgery now could have corrected the resulting problem. Think what they are doing today by reattaching severed limbs!

In any event, the tendons in this young hand had fractured up the arm with the result that the surgeon had to make an incision about one and one half inches long up the little finger side of the wrist to reach the tendons and each time he sewed one it would break since they were like small rubber bands. Apparently, he was able to reconnect the main artery but in the process he got the tendons mixed up and failed to re-attach one of the very important tendons to the thumb which was meant to that day I have been unable to pick up a coin, pin or many other things with that hand.

Recuperation was slow and I remember so well returning to my fifth grade class that fall with my impressively bandaged hand lying on a pillow. Often the wound would bleed discoloring the bandage and me. Boy, I felt bandaged. I had a time difficult time adjusting to school life as well as to my personal needs. That fall brought many trips to the doctor's office has hardly the bandage was removed and the stitches taken out. Even today I can remember so well the doctor saying as my father fainted and fell to the floor. "Don't worry about him, he will be all right, we have a job to do here."

As this point my hand was doubled tightly in a fist and several times a week for what seemed like years, I went to a therapist after school who massaged my hand with her olive oil to strengthen the tendons as well as stretch them in hopes of making the hand seem more normal. In time it looked better but in recent years I have lost much of my flexibility, and of course I have never been able to move the fingers independently.

But I survived and soon I began to live a near what normal life again. How I very finished the fifth grade I cannot tell you but come the next year I was promoted to sixth grade right on schedule!

It didn't take long, though, to be back on the milk truck and I suspect I was partly to blame for the early return. You see, it was our way of life, and I can get somewhat nostalgic remembering those days when my brother and I would ride on the step behind the truck and make deliveries as Dad drove. He would help when necessary.

Purple Haze

With Farmers' Fair now upon Dillsburg, the whole town is very busily preparing. Even NHS has gotten a little extra home from this time of year.

The students at NHS get a day off for no apparent academic reason. The district gives us the day to sleep in and get ready for the coming weekend. The day off also helps the students relax before the hectic three days ahead.

To get ready for the weekend, people must prepare and set up hours before the actual fair begins and spend a lot of money for the seemingly short weekend of activities.

Thursday and Friday are for the purpose of working, which is not always so easy. But the work put in on these two days is definitely worth the while on Friday night and all day Saturday. A lot of people are needed to work at the various concession stands and many of these people are students. They work for every imaginenable group and organization. It keeps some kids out of trouble for the day.

When not working, the students seem to rule the streets. The feeling of being able to roam as well is sensational. The atmosphere somewhat resembles Mardi Gras in New Orleans although we don't have masks or Cajun food. The parades each night are sidesights to the socializing that goes on before and after. It may seem like everything is in a social event and in truth it is! The parades are fun and some things to the parades are great but gathering with the entire town is part of the reason for the year's event. The streets are crowded, the food is gone, and everyone shows. The perfect entertainment at an orderly party such as Farmers Fair.

Farmers Fair brings much more than parades and food. It also puts our teachers at NHS in good moods. They seem to know what the weekend is like, so they ease up on the books. There are those teachers who insist that the students have all day Friday to work on schoolwork but the majority of the faculty understands the time involved with Farmers Fair.

An issue during Farmers Fair that many people don't think about is parking. The whole idea of parking and enough room for all of the vehicles is a problem and it can be a real crisis for young drivers. This may not be difficult for most adults but for new drivers at NHS it is a HORROR! They fear the task of parking at night, parking in dark alleys, and worst of all, parking in perfect light. I know this experience because I [illegible] these new [illegible] The forthcoming [illegible] town are [illegible] of everything. Good luck and be careful of [illegible] weekend.

As with every [illegible] columns, the [illegible] Dauphin. It will be a [illegible] decision between the parade and the football game, but hopefully we will see [illegible] Robert F. Boslet field that night. Also, good luck to the [illegible] soccer, [illegible] and football teams. [illegible]
